Q1. Can you describe two methods of struggle that the women's movement used to raise issues? If you had to organise a struggle against stereotypes, about what women can or cannot do, what method would you employ from the ones that you have read about? Why would you choose this particular method?

Ans. Two methods of struggle that the women's movement used to raise issues were:

Campaigning - Campaigning is mobilizing public concern in order to achieve a social, political or commercial aim. Campaigns to fight discrimination and violence against women are an important part of the women's movement. Campaigns have also led to new laws being passed.

Protesting - It means expressing an objection to what someone has said or done. The women's movement raises its voice when violations against women take place or for example, when a law or policy acts against their interests. Public rallies and demonstrations are a very powerful way of drawing attention to injustices.

If I had to organise struggle against stereotypes, about what women can or cannot do, I would like to employ campaigning method as what pressure cannot do, awareness about the issue can do effectively.
